Late Week Rain In Far South To Be Followed By Cooling - By Drew Lerner

Kansas City, August 18 (World Weather, Inc.) – Rain is still expected Friday through Sunday in southern coffee production areas of Brazil and the precipitation event will be followed by much cooler air. The rain event will be closely monitored for possible flowering in parts of Parana and Sao Paulo, but rain in Sul de Minas should not be great enough to induce flowering. Temperatures will not be cold enough to produce damaging conditions either, but it will get a little nippy Sunday through Tuesday.

BRAZIL

Mostly dry weather occurred in coffee production areas of Brazil Wednesday. Afternoon high temperatures were in the upper 20s and lower 30s Celsius most often, but middle and upper 30s continued from northern Minas Gerais to central Bahia where extremes reached 38 degrees. A strong cold front will generate some rain from Parana to Sul de Minas and Rio de Janeiro Friday into Sunday. The precipitation will be most significant Friday night and Saturday with emphasis on Sao Paulo and Parana. The advertised rain may be great enough to induce a little flowering with amounts in the most important coffee production areas varying from 8 to 30 millimeters. Portions of northern Parana and southwestern Sao Paulo, however, may get 20 to 60 millimeters of rain, but such amounts are not likely to reach into the more important coffee areas to the immediate northeast. Rain totals up to 30 millimeters are most likely in southern and eastern Sao Paulo and possibly a few of the southernmost Sul de Minas locations.

Southernmost Rio de Janeiro may also receive some of the greater rain totals, but no widespread flowering is expected in these areas. Flowering will be most likely in northern Parana and southwestern Sao Paulo if the rain is as heavy as advertised for those areas. The bulk of Sul de Minas and northeastern Sao Paulo are not expected to receive quite enough rain to induce flowering. The situation will be closely monitored, however. The precipitation will break up to insignificant showers as it lifts to the northeast Sunday and Monday. Rainfall in Espirito Santo, Zona de Mata, central and northern Minas Gerais and coastal Bahia will be less than 10 millimeters with no threat of flowering expected. Generally dry weather will then resume and prevail through most of next week.

Monday and Tuesday mornings will be coolest from Parana to southernmost Sul de Minas where low temperatures will slip to the range of 2 to 6 degrees. A few of the coolest locations may experience a little light frost in low-lying areas, but most of the coffee will be spared from damage. Temperatures will rebound later next week. High temperatures today will be in the middle and upper 20s except in northern Minas Gerais and interior Bahia where lower to middle 30s are likely. The warm weather will continue in northern coffee areas Friday and Saturday, but cooling in the south will induce high temperatures in the teens and lower 20s during the peak of the rain event.

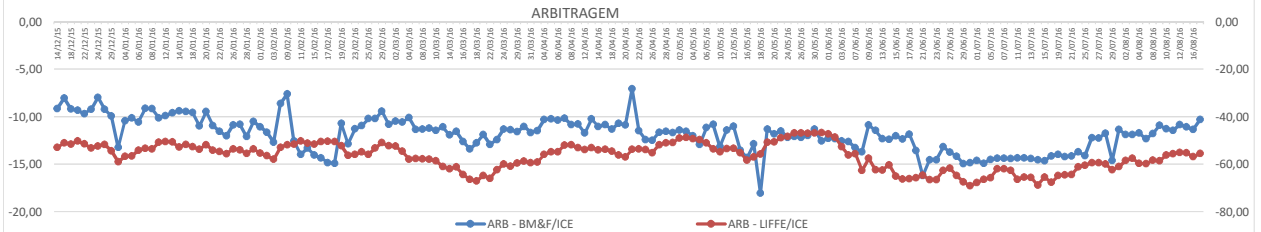

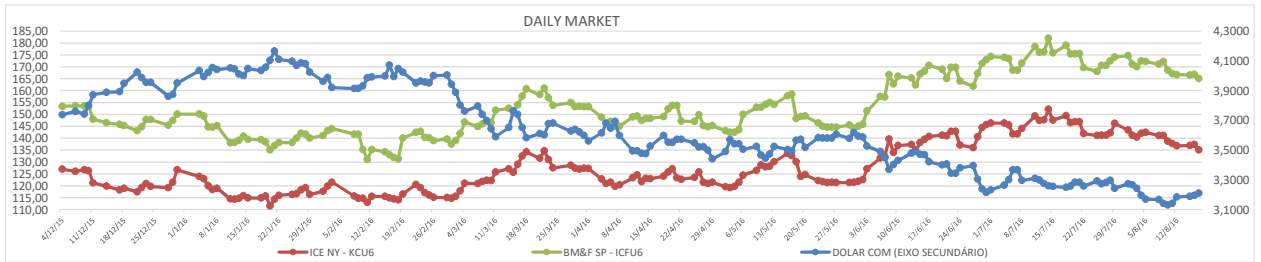

Lowest temperatures in the mornings until early next week will be in the upper single digits and teens with a few temperatures over 20 in the far north. Northern Brazil will cool down next week, as well, with highs dipping to the upper 20s and lower 30s while lows are in the upper single digits and teens.
