Brazil Coffee Weather
Most Crop Areas To Get Rain In Next 10 Days

By Drew Lerner

Kansas City, November 17 (World Weather, Inc.) – Rain in Brazil coffee areas Wednesday was most significant in northern portions of Minas Gerais and southern Bahia, but over the next ten days all of nation's coffee areas will get rain at one time or another. Some of the accumulated rain totals by the end of next week will be moderate to heavy in portions of northern Minas Gerais, southern Bahia and northern Espírito Santo.

BRAZIL

Showers and thunderstorms occurred Wednesday from central Minas Gerais to parts of Bahia. Rain totals through 0600 GMT today ranged from 1 to 18 millimeters. Mostly dry weather occurred from Sul de Minas and Espírito Santo to northern Paraná. High temperatures were in the upper 20s and lower 30s Celsius.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms will be possible in early all coffee production regions from Sao Paulo to Bahia today and Friday with daily rainfall of 3 to 15 millimeters and local totals to 25. However, most of the significant rain will remain from central Minas Gerais and parts of Zona de Mata to Bahia.

During the weekend, precipitation will be primarily concentrated over Bahia, northern Minas Gerais and parts of far northern Espírito Santo with daily amounts of 10 to 30 millimeters and local totals of more than 50 millimeters. Most areas from Sul de Minas, Zona de Mata and Cerrado Mineiro southward to Paraná will be dry.

Next week's precipitation may concentrate more on northern portions of Sul de Minas, Cerrado Mineiro, Rio de Janeiro and southern Espírito Santo. Daily rainfall of 5 to 20 millimeters and local amounts over 35 millimeters will occur with nearly widespread coverage by Friday, Nov. 25. Rain is also expected late next week (Wednesday through Saturday, Nov. 26) in Paraná and Sao Paulo with daily amounts of 4 to 20 millimeters.

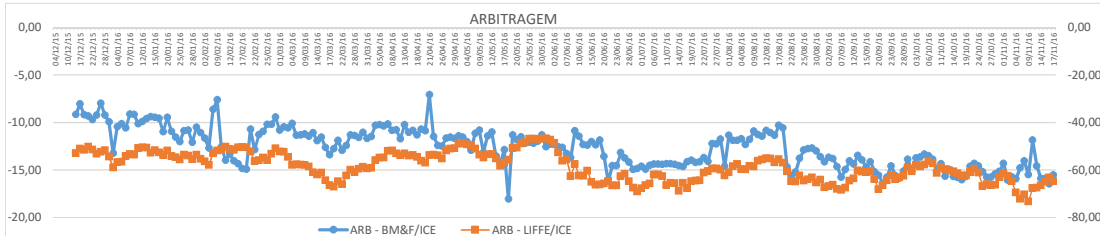

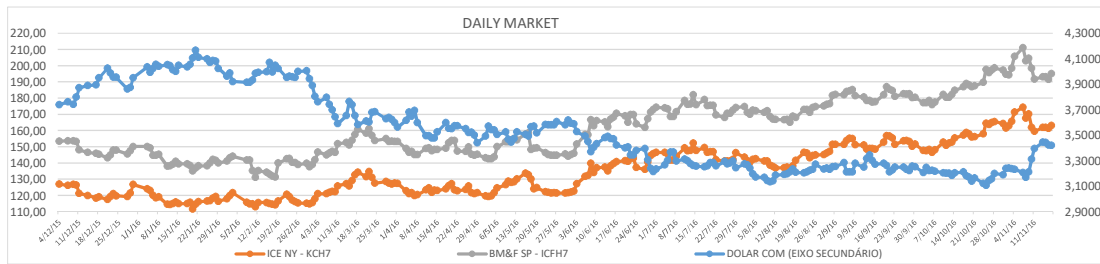

Temperatures will be seasonable across most coffee production areas with highs most often varying from the middle 20s to lower 30s. Some middle 30-degree highs will be possible in Paraná, Sao Paulo and northern Bahia during the driest days. Morning lows will be in the upper teens through the lower 20s.
